Creating a future for Ethiopian children

SMCF – creating a future for Ethiopia’s children

Although another country-wide famine is unlikely in Ethiopia, many families are still very poor and have to rely on food aid when harvests fail. However over the past 25 years the proven community development approach of SMCF and its partner JeCCDO means that many communities can now stand on their own feet.

SMCF and JeCCDO organise and train local community development organisations which know where the need is greatest. At their request, we support the carers of vulnerable children so that they can afford to send their children to school, and not abandon them to exploitative labour or the streets; we help those carers to earn a living by providing training and start-up capital; and also help communities to grow vegetables on spare land to provide nutritious food. We also help with water, sanitation and HIV/AIDS prevention amongst young people

Children's Fund Ethiopia

25 years ago the UK was shocked by television pictures of starving children in Ethiopia. Although many things have improved, Ethiopian children remain vulnerable to the effects of poverty, food shortages, illness and exploitation.

Today St Matthew's Children's Fund works with communities in Ethiopia's urban slums to help them nurture their children - by providing direct support for vulnerable children and by assisting the community to become self-reliant.

25 years ago the UK was shocked by television pictures of starving children in Ethiopia. Although many things have improved, Ethiopian children remain vulnerable to the effects of poverty, food shortages, illness and exploitation.

Today St Matthew's Children's Fund works with communities in Ethiopia's urban slums to help them nurture their children - by providing direct support for vulnerable children and by assisting the community to become self-reliant.

The Twenty5 appeal will benefit children in five poor urban communities by:

- Providing direct support so children can be looked after by their families or carers
- Working with schools so that they can provide a good education to all children
- Providing alternative education for those who have missed out on school
- Working with street children to enable them to return home or to provide skills training and support

But we cannot make these lasting changes without your help. £5 a month will provide a basic education for a street child; £20 a month could support a school whilst a gift of £250 helps a young person gain a useful skill.
